The gospel always rises up to outlive its pallbearers! Ravi Zechariah
The demise of Christianity is the desire of our enemy and he will solicit any and all assistance for this demonic purpose. No doubt the dilution of sincere faith into a sightseer faith, is one of his most effective accomplishments creating generations who identify with a faith that they barely know and rarely acknowledge. This vague belief becomes the expected norm, leading adherents to accept an ever increasing conceptual idea of a God and faith that doesn't actually exist.
This quasi-faith becomes accepted and expected by the culture at large, leaving those who sincerely practice their beliefs appearing as oddities to the rest!
This drift, of course, is a form of persuasion ostracizing those who refuse to capitulate.
I am in full agreement with King Solomon here, as he writes, there's nothing new under the sun... God's way always has enemies and God always has those with quickened hearts ready to brace the storm.
So the question du jour for you is this... Are you a dilutor or a saluter?
Is God your first and foremost pursuit, or one among many?
Hmmm?
Teach us Your way, O Lord!
